Provincial Boundaries in North-West Galatia in the Light of New Epigraphic Evidence

So far provincial boundaries passed in north-west Galatia, which is the junction of three provinces (Asia, Galatia and Bithynia), were not precisely known. Since 2014, an epigraphic survey covering more than half the province of Eskişehir in central Turkey has yielded dozens of new inscriptions that offer new information about administrative arrangements. The area covered by the survey lies between the cities of Juliopolis, Dorylaion, Gordion and Amorion, and includes the imperial estate of the Choria Considiana as well as the cities of Colonia Germa and Pessinus, Akkilaion and Midaion. Focusing on the boundary established between 25 BC and AD 235 in Asia Minor, the aim of this presentation is to discuss the boundaries of cities, estates and three provinces in north-west Galatia in the light of new and existing epigraphic evidence as well as the regional geographical setting.
