KLASSISKE STUDIERS SEMINARRÆKKE E2020

Edith Hall, King's College London Great Danish Women Classicists: An Adventure in the History of Classical Scholarship

When she was co-editing Women Classical Scholars (2016) with Rosie Wyles, Edith Hall was struck by the way that Danish women seem to have contributed disproportionately important works to international classical scholarship relative to the size of the Danish population. The invitation to Denmark--Hall's first ever visit to the country--prompted her to take the opportunity to find out more about some of the most intriguing of these women, from Birgitte Thott in the 17th century to Ada Adler in the 20th.
