Forensic Archaeology: New Methods to Illuminate the Criminal Antiquities Market

The talk will focus on three different projects taking place simultaneously at Aarhus University. They examine different, but interconnected, parts of the antiquities market and its clients. One focuses on problematic antiquities currently on sale; one outlines a new method for reconstructing trafficking paths; the third studies archaeological material already confiscated from dealers. Separately and together these projects contribute to our understanding better the continuous criminal behaviour of the individuals, companies and institutions involved in the illicit trade of antiquities.
